Follow these concrete steps to get your issue resolved or escalate the claim: 1. Document Everything – Before escalating, gather your itinerary number, email confirmations, receipts, payment records, and screenshots of any chat transcripts or cancellation policies. Having solid paperwork is critical. Orbitz's claim process requires documentation, and well-organized records can significantly speed up resolution. 2. Escalate with Customer Service – If the initial support agent cannot resolve your issue, politely ask to have your claim escalated to a supervisor or a member of the specialized dispute/refund team. If calling, you can specifically ask for case management to review your itinerary. The fastest way to get Orbitz to respond is by calling their customer service line directly, as phone support typically offers the shortest wait times compared to email or social media. When you call, have your booking reference, passport details, and travel dates ready so the agent can assist you without delay. 3. File a Chargeback with Your Credit Card – If Orbitz denies your claim or fails to provide a promised refund, dispute the charge with your credit card issuer. Credit card companies generally require you to submit the claim within 60 to 90 days of the charge. Provide your documentation, including proof of any cancellation policies you are relying on. The Fair Credit Billing Act (FCBA) protects you from unauthorized or incorrect charges, so ensure you submit your dispute in writing and attach invoices, confirmations, or correspondence. 4. File a Formal Complaint – For unresolvable disputes, users often report that submitting a complaint to the Better Business Bureau (BBB) is an effective way to get an executive response from Orbitz. Orbitz has an A+ BBB rating and is motivated to respond to complaints to protect their reputation. You can also file a complaint with the Department of Transportation (DOT) for flight-related issues. 5. Small Claims Court – For larger financial disputes (such as unfulfilled flight credits or denied refunds), users in online communities like Reddit and Facebook travel groups agree that filing a case in Small Claims Court is a viable option. This typically requires filing paperwork with your local county clerk's office and serving the documents to Orbitz's registered agent in your state. Small claims court is designed for disputes under a certain amount (usually $5,000–$10,000) and does not require an attorney.
